GALVANIZING
DANCE STUDIES
building anti-racist praxis, transformative connections, and movement(s) of radical care

2021 ANNUAL CONFERENCE
OCTOBER 14-17, 2021
RUTGERS UNIVERSITY, NEW BRUNSWICK NJ, USA
The Dance Studies Association (DSA) holds its fifth annual conference, “Galvanizing Dance Studies: Building Anti-Racist Praxis, Transformative Connections, and Movement(s) of Radical Care,” as a hybrid in-person/virtual gathering at Rutgers University from October 14-17, 2021. Performances, break-out sessions, and receptions will be held variously across Rutgers University’s campus and the Hyatt Regency New Brunswick, as well as virtual and livestreamed events.

As our first major gathering since the cancellation of our 2020 conference due to the global pandemic, we look forward to welcoming participants across platforms and spaces. As a community of dance artists and scholars who prioritize shared movement and performance experiences, our membership is anxious to gather over these urgent themes of anti-racist rebuilding and connection. The 2021 conference theme is a part of DSA’s ongoing work to reckon with the white supremacist histories of our discipline and to rebuild through critical and careful anti-racist action.

Our conference programming includes plenary panels, lecture demonstrations, working groups, and more. We begin with embodied workshops led by a team from AI4Afrika, a consortium dedicated to the inclusion of African talent and perspective in the development trajectory of Artificial Intelligence. Kyle Marshall of Kyle Marshall Choreography, a 2018 Juried Bessie Award winner and NJ State Council on the Arts Fellow, will present evening performances. And additional events give focus to global indigeneities, as well as the second year of five-year internationalizing initiative “Provincializing Dance Studies” curated by senior scholar Susan Leigh Foster.

The Program Committee has collectively re-imagined this international conference as a vessel that builds, explores, collaborates, performs, and agitates current practices within the field(s) of dance. Specifically, as our first COVID-times conference, it is important that our work responds to our current global crises. This is the start of a long process of holding ourselves to account. From this generative yet fractious position, dancers, choreographers, activists, curators, pedagogues, technologists, scholars, and those who otherwise engage with dance and movement practices will interrogate the many embodied, disembodied, and colonial laden conversations around the urgent needs of our current moment, by putting theory into action.
The Dance Studies Association (DSA) is an international organization of dance scholars, educators, and artists that aims to strengthen the visibility of dance as embodied practice, creative endeavor and intellectual discipline. Formed in 2017 as the merged entity of the Congress on Research in Dance (CORD) and the Society of Dance History Scholars (SDHS), DSA is both grounded in and extends the work of these two organizations. Bringing the field of dance studies into the twenty-first century, DSA showcases the tremendous growth of research and publication over the past fifty years. Annual conferences draw together hundreds of scholars and artists to share research, award path-breaking scholarship, and discuss pressing issues in a global and diverse field.

In the past year DSA has navigated the chaotic challenges of global pandemic and political unrest with a clarified mandate to increase member access, center BIPOC voices, call out and undo violent white supremacist culture around and within us, and support an increasingly contingent work force. This work began with the relaunch of our membership fee structure and continues with new editorial voices and an overall transparency of operations. Throughout 2021 we are undertaking an Equity Audit; an open-access archive of CORD, SDHS, and DSA histories and data is the first step towards a more equitable future.

Through this work, DSA continues to grow. Our membership is nearly 800 strong, new members joining from adjacent fields of anthropology, musicology, sociology, performances studies, area studies and more. As a constituent member of the American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS), DSA advances the field of dance studies through research, publication, performance, and outreach to audiences across the arts, humanities, and social sciences.
